

A Gentleman's Guide to Love and Murder

Call Back List

Thank you to all who auditioned. We know that self-tape submissions are not ideal but you all did a nice job with making sure your personality and talent showed. Please find below the list of those that have a callback for

A Gentleman's Guide to Love and Murder (GGLAM).

You will find music cuts and tracks to record for submission by Tuesday, October 27 coming later this weekend.

If you are being considered for the ensemble you will have an on campus callback with Mr. Ushino on Thursday, October 29 at the designated time below.

Reading callbacks will be on Zoom from 4:00pm-10:00pm on Thursday, October 29. (released as needed)

If you are listed for a particular role(s) you should be familiar with all of the script sides for that particular part. If you have an english accent feel free to use it but if it is going to get in your way then don't worry about it for the callback. We want to see you - GGLAM is a comedy that revolves around larger than life characters and your individual personality.

Please note that due to COVID restrictions we are only able to work with 16-20 actors on this production. So- many very talented performers may not be cast. Please do not take this as a personal rejection, but rather a situation of the times.

Please note that just because you are called back for a role does not guarantee you will be cast for that role and you may be asked to read a role you weren't called back for.

Please check the Virtual Callboard for updates and information through the weekend. Also, there is a video posted from Mr. Daunter that gives you some information about the show.

If you have any questions, contact Mrs. Graff at Clgraff@capousd.org
